

Century Gothic 1991

Century Gothic is a geometric, sans-serif typeface designed in 1991 for Monotype Imaging. The type designers were based on Sol Hess's typeface, "Twentieth Century." It is a digital typeface with many notable features such as its single-story lowercase "a" and "g" and thick, rounded "i" and "j" dots or titles. Century Gothic's x-height is high and has no variance in stroke which makes it a very readable screen typeface. This typeface is ideal for children's books, language teaching, and is commonly found on movie posters.
